

BLACK HISTORY RESOURCE CALENDAR

We all should know that diversity makes for a rich tapestry, and we must understand that all the threads of the tapestry are equal in value
no matter what their color.

MAYA ANGELOU

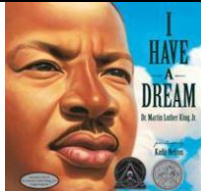

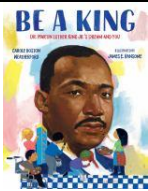

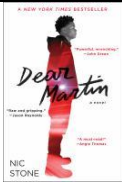

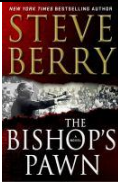

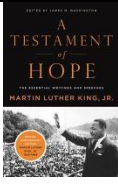

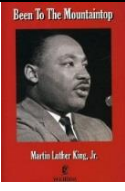

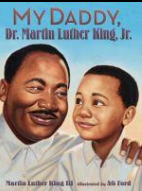

Thank you to the staff at Windsor Public Library and John Muir patrons who helped proof or make suggestions.

A special thanks to George Thomas' Family for the gift of fabric that helped bind this calendar.

Children’s Fiction	Children’s Non-Fiction	Young Adult Fiction	Young Adult Non-fiction	Adult Fiction	Adult Non-Fiction	DVD	E-RESOURCES

Some materials are about little known people and/or events. The materials feature people from around the world and locally. It is my hope you will find something new and interesting. I’ve included Windsor Public Library catalogue links on most of the material for you to type in the address bar on your computer.

You can also access these resources by typing in a title at www.windsorpubliclibrary.com. Click on SEARCH CATALOGUE, then type in the title of the book, digital books or movies.

This is not a complete list. There are so many other resources and stories to be discovered. To find more please call our staff at 519-255-6770 or email us at askalibrarian@windsorpubliclibrary.com or go to our website and explore www.windsorpubliclibrary.com

A FINAL NOTE: Please don’t be limited by the grouping of the material. Some pages are divided by age categories, others by themes, and still other by resource type.

Here is an example of a board book which is for children ages 3 and under, but this book has words that some adults may not know. This book is for everyone.

This book is in the section for children ages 6-12 but the tools can be used for Young Adults and Adults.

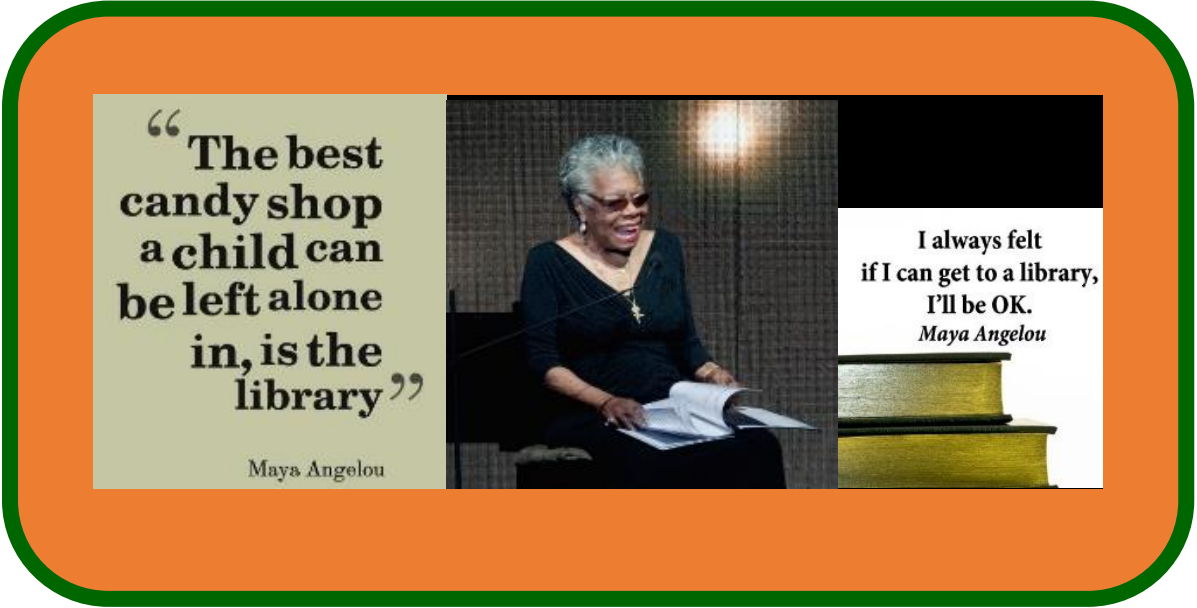

I hope you enjoy learning about these people and events as much as I did.

NOW use the power of your

and experience the joy of learning.

Last year's Black History month poster from: <https://www.canada.ca/en/canadian-heritage/campaigns/black-history-month/poster.html>

Black History Month poster

Black History Month is an opportunity for all Canadians to learn about the many contributions Black Canadians have made to Canada. This year's theme for Black History Month is "Canadians of African Descent: Going forward, guided by the past". This was inspired by the theme of the United Nations' International Decade for People of African Descent \(2015-2024\).

Feet forward, head turned backward, the Sankofa bird reflects on the past to build a successful future.

Black history in Canada

People of African descent have been a part of shaping Canada's heritage and identity since the arrival of Mathieu Da Costa, a navigator and interpreter, whose presence in Canada dates back to the early 1600s.

The role of people of African descent in Canada has not always been viewed as a key feature in Canada's historic landscape. There is little mention that some of the Loyalists who came here after the American Revolution and settled in the Maritimes were people of African descent, or of the many sacrifices made in wartime by soldiers of African descent as far back as the War of 1812.

Few Canadians are aware of the fact that African people were once enslaved in the territory that is now Canada, or of how those who fought enslavement helped to lay the foundation of Canada's diverse and inclusive society.

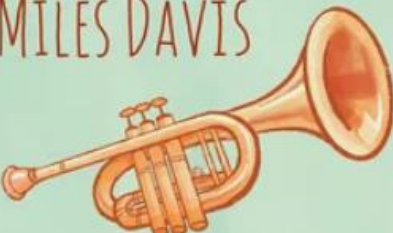

Black History Month is a time to learn more about these Canadian stories and the many other important contributions of Black Canadians to the settlement, growth and development of Canada, and about the diversity of Black communities in Canada and their importance to the history of this country.

Interview with author <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aD7gprKqLBk>

Keats' Inspiration In 1940, Life magazine published a short photo essay focused on a little boy in Liberty County, Ga., who was about to undergo a blood test. Keats was struck by the sweet images of the child, and cut the group of photographs out of the magazine. That little boy was the inspiration for Keats' character Peter, the African-American protagonist of The Snowy Day and six books that followed.

"The point is that this is a beautiful book about a child's encounter with snow, and the wonder of it," Pope says. Peter was among the first non-caricatured African-Americans to be featured in a major children's book. But Pope says Keats — who was white — wasn't necessarily trying to make a statement about race when he created Peter.

"He said, well, all the books he had ever illustrated, there had never been a child of color, and they're out there — they should be in the books, too," Pope says. "But was he trying to make a cause book, was he trying to make a point? No." That approach earned Keats a lot of criticism from civil rights leaders who felt he had not gone far enough. "They were worried," Pope says. "This was a time when the African-American community was fighting for a place at the table, was fighting to be heard ... and in the past, when white authors had written about black characters, it had not done well. It was not good."

The rebels had come at night—wielding weapons, torches, and machetes. She had watched as her mother and six-year-old sister were gunned down in a refugee camp, far from their home in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The rebels were killing people who weren't from the same tribe. "Good-bye, life, " she said to the man ready to shoot her. Remarkably, the rebel didn't pull the trigger, and Sandra escaped into the night. Thus began a new life for her and her surviving family members. With no home and no money, they struggled to stay alive. Eventually, through a United Nations refugee program, they moved to America, only to face yet another ethnic disconnect. Sandra may have crossed an ocean, but there was now a much wider divide she had to overcome. And it started with middle school in New York."--

“Things aren't ever what they seem to be when you first look at them. What's important is that you keep your mind wide open and try to understand what's going on from a lot of different angles.”

“I spent many hours ensconced in the local library, reading - nay, devouring - book after book after book. Books were my soul's delight.”

I hope you found new things to learn about these amazing people and their contributions to this world.

I Dream A World
by Langston Hughes

I dream a world where man
No other man will scorn,
Where love will bless the earth
And peace its paths adorn
I dream a world where all
Will know sweet freedom's way,
Where greed no longer saps the soul
Nor avarice blights our day.
A world I dream where black or white,
Whatever race you be,
Will share the bounties of the earth
And every man is free,
Where wretchedness will hang its head
And joy, like a pearl,
